Spring Has Sprung!

Not only for the flora and fauna but for the housing market too. We are seeing good numbers of buyers through home opens again and plenty of offers being presented, which is a positive sign.

According to REIWA, the number of homes on the market continues to fall and the turnover of properties is steadily increasing with an average of around 500 properties selling each week. In perspective, 6 to 8 months ago we were averaging around 300 sales per week in Perth.

In the Western Suburbs, if you are still waiting for the bottom of the market then you have missed it by about 6 months, as properties in that area of Perth are starting to sell within a few days of going on the market. After a very long absence, we are also seeing investors coming back into the market. Not in large numbers yet but the very savvy or long term investors are definitely showing interest in Perth again, often calling and flying in from over east to buy property here.

We have definitely seen the back of the worst of the market now. Though there will still be some areas of Perth that experience more pain, suburbs from Baldivis down to Mandurah for example, as people who speculated on their purchase of house and land packages in these areas are finding their homes are worth less than they paid for them. There are also quite a few mortgagee sales to go through the system as some owners struggle with mortgage repayments.

So don't wait to buy, do it now! or be prepared to miss out.

Just last week we had a buyer tell us he wanted to wait to put an offer in as it is still a buyers market and the seller would inevitably drop the price.

What he didn't know was we already had two offers on that home and another one on the way. The home sold, that night, above asking price. This by the way isn't a one off.

My word of advice if you're looking to buy: Get your finance sorted first, as best as you can, as the banks are still making it tough for borrowing and what used to work a few years ago (even a few months ago) doesn't necessarily mean it will work now. If you need help with this, feel free to give us a call and we can point you in the right direction.

One other thing, if you're buying now, the days of making cheeky offers and them getting accepted have passed.

As stated previously, the fundamentals are all pointing in the right direction for the market to continue to rise with low unemployment, and what has been a very weak WA economy over the last few years is showing tentative signs of turning around, albeit slow. In addition to the continuation of low interest rates that are here to stay for a good while yet.

Fearing the market over east would cause the Reserve Bank to lift interest rates, with the way the market was climbing, it looks as though the APRA changes have done the trick and taken the heat out of the market and the need for any interest rate rise.

Nevertheless, outlook for the Perth property market is positive as we head towards the end of 2017 with now being a good time for sellers who want to move into a new property in the New Year, to get their homes on the market while there is less competition.
